JAMIE WASHINGTON’S PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT WORKSHOP
FOR FACULTY, STAFF & COMMUNITY LEADERS

Friday, September 13th in Port O’ Call – Cartwright Center at 1:05 – 3pm

Fifty years after the national March on Washington for Civil Rights, we as a people can be proud of how as a society we have made movement towards a greater justice and inclusion. At the same time, it is important to acknowledge that our world is more complex in understanding how to engage not only our “racialized identities” and experiences, but also our gender, class, sexual orientations, gender identities and expressions, immigration status, spiritual practices and religions, disabilities and so much more. We all get to decide the role we will play in helping to move our communities forward. This interactive workshop will offer the tools needed for greater effectiveness and a more inclusive world.

Sponsored by the Affirmative Action Office, Campus Activities Board, Campus Climate & Diversity, College of Business Administration, College of Liberal Studies, College of Science and Health, International Education, La Crosse Student Association, Leadership & Involvement Center, Multicultural Student Services, Pride Center, Rainbow Unity, Residence Life, Student Affairs Professional Staff Development Committee & University Centers

And We’ve Got a Long Way to Go
