Emmy award winning newscaster Soledad O’Brien is regarded as one of the most illustrious members of the modern day press. Her career as a newscaster has brought her to host the Anniversary of Martin Luther King Jr.’s March on Washington, to host the Global Citizens Central Park Event, and to countless interviews with many of the world’s most influential and powerful political leaders.

As the creator and producer of the critically acclaimed documentary series “Black in America,” one of CNN’s most successful domestic and international franchises, O’Brien is currently partnered with many of the leading international brands, including Google, CNN, HBO, National Geographic, and more. Appointed as a Distinguished Fellow by Harvard University in 2013, Soledad has been named journalist of the year by the national Association of Black Journalists and one of Newsweek Magazine’s “10 People Who Make America Great.”

“Soledad O’Brien Presents: Being Black in America” is a community conversation that tackles issues of interest to the African American audience that are frequently overlooked and underserved. Powered by Soledad’s partnership with Google, the live show will feature clips of and appearances by the stars of her highly acclaimed series, “Black in America.” Her focus is telling the untold story, and creating a forum for conversations around the divisive issues of race, class, and opportunity.
